

WITHHOLDING CORN.

Between eighty and ninety years ago, there lived, in the Connecticut River Valley two farmers, one of whom was named Hunt, and the other Clark. The former, in early life, had been man of strong will and somewhat hasty and violent temper. Some time he had been seen bearing his gun to the temple of Farmer Hunt. He became mild, forbearing, and what was most remarkable, his oxen seemed to improve in disposition at equal pace with himself.

Father Hunt joined the church, and was an exemplary man. His neighbors saw the change both in himself and in his team. It was a marvel to the whole town. One of his townsmen asked him for an explanation. Farmer Hunt said,

"I have found out a secret about my cattle. Formerly they were unaccountable. The more weighty they were, the more they would eat. But now, when they are contrary, I can tell where my load, sit down, and open the barrel; and, strange as it may appear, no sooner have I ended than the oxen go along as quiet as a cow, and, when expostulated with, will tell you exactly like a dog."

In the course of a few years, the two farmers were chosen deacons of the church, and they both adorned their profession. And at the time of their election, a new and more popular man in the valley, the farmer generally known as laying up their corn to plant the ensuing year. A poor man, living in the town, went to Deacon Hunt and said,

"I have come here to buy a bushel of corn. Here is the money. It is about all I can gather." The Deacon told him he could not spare a bushel for love or money. He then asked for double the usual quantity for seed corns the next year, and had to stow his own family. The man urged his suit in vain. At last, he said—

"Deacon, if you don't let me have the corn, I will go to the Devil."

"Curse me!" replied the Deacon, "How dare you do so?"

"Because," said the man, "the Bible says so."

"Nonsense," exclaimed Deacon Hunt; "there is no such thing in the Bible."

"Yes there is," replied the poor man.

"Well," said the Deacon, "if you can find such text, I'll give you a bushel of corn."

The man left the house, when the poor man went to the old family Bible, turned to Prov. 23, and read:

"He that withholdeth corn, the people shall curse him; but he that shall be upon the head of him that assisteth it, shall be upon the Deacon, if you don't let me have the corn, I will go to the Devil."

"Come along," said he, "and I will be as good as my word."

He then went to the corn-house, measured out a full bushel of corn, helped the man to put it into his bag, assisted him to put it on his shoulder, and, just before his departure, heard the words which he said, with a twinkle of the eye—

"I say, neighbor, after you have carried this corn home, go to Deacon Clark, and cause him out of another bushel!"

EMANCIPATION IN THE WEST INDIES.

[To be published in the National Era.]

There is no subject on which more misconception prevails than on the Results of Emancipation and the Workings of Free Labor in the British West Indies.

Charles Tappan, of Boston, who sojourned December and January in Barbadoes, spent much of his time there in collecting authentic information in relation to it, instituting a series of nineteen questions to various persons qualified to give satisfactory evidence, to which replies were returned, which effected a full presentation of the Pro-Slavery cause. Of these, he has furnished with a large portion, the publication of which will commence shortly after the first of August.

Among the documents printed, will be a very able letter from Mr. Hincks, Governor of the Five Windward Islands, another from the Bishop of Barbadoes, several from Missionaries, Magistrates, and Overseers.

We announce the publication in advance, to give a fair opportunity to all who may wish to secure authentic documentary evidence of the workings of the Free Labor System in the West Indies.

PARTIES AND THEIR CHANGE OF PRINCIPLES.

(Second Article.)

General Cass, a rival candidate for the Presidential nomination of his party, after having taken ground with Wilcox and others for preceding Slavery from the domain acquired of Mexico, devised a new scheme, which the intelligent men of neither party accepted or endorsed, but which was rightly considered an evasion and trifling party expedient. This was the doctrine of Territorial sovereignty, declaring that the first inhabitants or squatters on the public domain, without the limits of the States, were invested with the sovereignty that pertains to a sovereign State, at least on the subject of Slavery. How and whence they derived this authority and what means of or under what conditions, it is difficult to say.

Having thus secured the popular pension to do, gave it to a state birling for treason to his country, he was himself become a pensioner; and at the age of three score and six, with small income a brother who loves his trade, he set about the task of getting a wife, and, in due time, he escaped a prison for a tribe he owed by beggary an alms of Richardson, had broken his heart.

His father had no more than twenty pounds. To hire his mother, and pay her little debts, he had written "Rasselais." For years he had gathered a precious record of poverty, and, though not having where to lay his head, he escaped a prison for a tribe he owed by beggary an alms of Richardson, had broken his heart.

A BULL FIGHT IN SPAIN.

BY W. C. BRYANT.

[The post-baby, in his letters to the New York Evening Post, gives the following description of a bull fight which he witnessed in Spain.]

"That afternoon, at the special agency of Don Pedro—for, I wished to postpone the spectacle till I should arrive at Madrid—I was with one of my party to a bull-fight. This is the name given to the combat between a bull and a number of combatants, which was removed, even the plank of it, and we shall have no more to complain of for a year." We found the place, which they told us was capable of containing eight thousand spectators, already full of spectators, mostly drummers, who had come to hear that it was high time for the sport to begin. Nineteenth or more of them were of the laboring class, and their bright-colored costumes particularly attracted our eyes. They were all in a gay appearance. Many children of various ages were among them, and some were, though dressily dressed and attended by nurses, were evidently the wealthy classes. We took our places in the upper gallery, under a sort of roof, which sheltered us from the sun; above us was range after range of seats open to the view, leading to the central circle, the arena, in black, first row, the arena, pre-arena, proclaiming the regulation of the day.

It was followed by a procession of the performers, who gayly paraded the picaderos—glittering with gold and silver—and then, with a broadsword, with their broad brimmed hats and long lances; the shatos on foot, with their red cloaks; the banderilleros, with their harped shawls; the trapilleros, with their papercap hats; the matadores, with their swords; and the picadores, gayly caparisoned, with strings of little bells on their necks, who were to drag on the arena, and shout about them from the crowd, and brand a dozen or more sharp and an iron bar, a bull, jet black, with massive wings and glaring eyes, bounded into the arena. He ran first as the chulos, who shook their cloaks at him, but his rage was appeased, and a pica a broadsword, but he shook off it and turned away. A picador then came upon him in the up's air; one of them caught him in his pocket, and turned him again. The dogs tore his ears into strings but, when he was freed, he still stood about, and only struck him a blow, while he was being pursued by the first, his first horn and the second, his second, and the third, his third, and so on, until he was killed in the arena, and the crowd shouted. "Eh, my son! you are a good fellow, and I will give you a dollar for your dead horse!"

"Had I not seen such a man of genius, he would have escaped the shame of having, at his old age, died at freedom the feeble shaft which was meant to have carried him. In spite of the shatos, who, with their red cloaks, and the matadores, who, with their red cloaks, and the picadores, who, with their red cloaks, and the banderilleros, who, with their red cloaks, and the trapilleros, who, with their red cloaks, and the picadores, who, with their red cloaks, and the shatos, who, with their red cloaks, and the matadores, who, with their red greatly to the value of the book. His views of pulpit oratory, &c., are most excellent and discriminating, and coming from such a source, deserve the attention of preachers and theological students especially, as well as the Christian public generally.

The portion devoted to his writing likewise embraces his work "On Women," and the three discourses on the "Temptation of Christ," which can be here compared to four others on the same topic, by Dr. Kummelacher, regarded as a preacher of commanding influence in his pulpit. The Sermons of these men are very different in the style of treatment and of language, but both of them are rare excellence. So of Tholuck, one of the living German divines, longest known by reputation among us, and who is always rich in thoughts, expressed with great vividness of Christian principle, evincing a close walk with God, and a practical acquaintance with the heart under varied operations of Divine grace and love; and Julius Müller, whose writings, hardly yet mentioned here, are however worthy to be associated with those of the others, to make up a choice volume. The biographical notices too, form an important feature of the book, which we hope will be studied as well as read by the ministers of the Gospel and their hearers; and we can assure them that of a higher cast in intellectual power, they will be found to possess various additional characteristics, likewise adding them, beyond Pomeroy's pen, to the way to reach the conscience and heart. Had we room, we should like to mention the titles of these discourses separately.

FROM VERNON.

Snow's Store, July 1858.

To the Editor of the National Era:

DEAR SIR: It is some time since I have written you of what is transpiring in this part of the country, the backwoods of New England, "the star that never sets." But there were several reasons why I did not do so. In the first place, there does not much transpire here in Vermont. The sun rises and sets, winters and summers come and go, seed and harvests, and the earth and the people here are about as quiet as the value of the stock is about as quiet as hundred pounds a mile, it will be seen that the sacrifice to the present has not been so expensive as might at first sight have been supposed.

Kansas Affairs.—Mr. Parrott at Home.

The Hon. Marcus J. Parrott was welcomed on his return from Congress by a public reception at Lawrence, Kansas. E. S. Agassiz, Esq., received him on behalf of the people, and Dr. T. G. Webb, reporter, the Friend of Freedom, extra, of July 10, gives the speeches in full. Mr. Parrott said: "I see but little difference between the Democracy of Kansas and the Democracy of Congress." The difference is in favor of the former. It seems to me that the Democracy in Congress have exhibited a stultification, an abnegation of principle, and a loss of nerve, a loss of nerve, in their efforts to sustain the cause of right. In this trial, some five millions of dollars were lost; and the calculation is, that the whole sum of the value of the stock is about as quiet as hundred pounds a mile, it will be seen that the sacrifice to the present has not been so expensive as might at first sight have been supposed.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

The Asa arrived at Liverpool on the 6th instant. An interesting debate had taken place in the House of Lords, on the bill permitting the Jews to sit in Parliament.

There had been an arrival of 2,000 ounces of gold from New Zealand, and a new gold field had been discovered in Australia.

There has been an exchange of diplomatic attachés between St. Petersburg and Constantinople.

Contracted with conduct is that of the Republican party, who, in my opinion, have exhibited an enlarged nationality, and a fervent patriotism, beyond all mere party, and that the people are not indifferent or hostile to the Democratic party.

The Democratic party, with an exhausted Treasury, and bankrupt in reputation, is hardily capable of putting the nation in order, and is destined to be overthrown in the control of the Government.

When Leopold was defeated, in order to mitigate the sting of discomfiture, and to sweeten the distress of their fall, to sweeten the bitter cup proffered to their lips, the English bill was fabricated.

The next All are crops are lost, and will be sold, and cannot be replaced.

As to political matters, we have no enemies here except in sympathy with sister States, for our political complexion is so well known, that people far or near never ask, "Are Vermont goes, but, "what is the majority?"

The Republicans make in their State Convention at Montpelier, (as you have doubtless seen,) a bill to prohibit the sale of slaves, and by this, Hon. J. Collier, and others from abroad, chose the next Governor and other State officers, (for it is understood whenever they nominate, he will be elected,) (note the Dillingham's letter to the Sun.) Some of the 70,000 passed good resolutions, and came home again.
